JURISDICTION

Petitioner is a citizen of the United States having his principal place of residence in the State of California and California is a corporation incorporated under the laws of the United States having her principal place of business in the State of California.

The action arises under the Constitution of the United States, Article III, section 2, Clauses 1 and 2, in that the State of California has violated petitioner's 5th, 8th and 14th Amendments Rights. This court's jurisdiction is also invoked pursuant to Title 28 USC 1651(a).

Petitioner filed a $2254 Petition for Habeas Corpus, in the District Court, Central District of California on March 19, 1999.

On May 4, 1999, the District Court issued and Order To Show Cause, (See, Appendix D) in which Respondent complied. Upon pleadings being closed and at issue: The District Court dismissed without prejudice, for petitioner to move in the appropriate court of appeals for an order authorizing the district court to consider the application. (See, Appendix E)

On Feb. 7, 2000, petitioner filed a Motion For Permission To File Second Or Successive Habeas Corpus in the district court. And on March 27, 2000, the court of appeals for the Ninth Circuit denied petitioner's motion. (See, Appendix F)

In each proceeding petitioner specifically alleged violations of his state and federal constitutional right to a fair adjudication of the illegal sentence, which is in excess of that permitted by law.

Accordingly, petitioner has exhausted all available state and federal remedies both factually and legally. Exhaustion is not a jurisdictional bar but is discretionary under decisional law. Bowan v. Johnson 306 U.S. 19, 83 L.Ed 455, 59 S.Ct 442 (1939). The rule [of exhaustion] is not one defining power but one which relates to the appropriate exercise of power." 306 U.S. @ 27. Picard v. Connor, 404 U.S. 207, 30 L.Ed 438, (2 S.Ct. 509 (1971)).

Title 28 U.S.C. §2254(b), enacted in 1948 to codify existing case law, provide in relevant part, "An application for a writ of habeas corpus in behalf of a person in custody pursuant to the judgment of a state court shall not be granted unless it appears that the applicant has exhausted the remedies available in the courts of the state, * * * [underscoring added] No other state remedies exist or is available for petitioner to assert his claim where the trial court has acted in excess of jurisdiction, when it sentenced petitioner illegally to multiple sentences in excess.

CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY PROVISIONS INVOLVED

Amendments V, VIII and XIV to the United States Constitution is set forth in Appendix G.

The Court of Appeal for the Ninth Circuit, issued an Order, denying the petition for authorization to file a second or successive habeas petition in the district court.

STATEMENT OF THE FACTS

In January of 1998, Petitioner, Kade Allen, incarcerated at Correctional Training Facility, Soledad, California, requested from Miss Correctional Counselor, Ms. Hall, when would he be eligible for parole. The counselor then examined petitioner's Central Prison File and told petitioner that he had a determined sentence and plus a indetermined sentence, but looking at the sentencing record, it showed that petitioner was sentenced repeatedly for the same crimes consecutively. She then advised petitioner to write the court and ask them to correct the sentencing errors so that the sentence could reflect the crimes committed and not double for the same crime. Without the errors in the sentence, petitioner would have been eligible for parole 13 years age.

Based on the information given to petitioner concerning the illegal sentence, he acted diligently to assert these fact in court because it would advanced the eligibility of his release. Petitioner sought to have the Superior Court of California, County of Los Angeles, to correct the illegal sentence and request was denied. (See, Appendix A)

Petitioner filed in the Court of Appeal, Second Appellate District and was denied relief. (See, Appendix B)

Petitioner filed a Petition For Writ of Mandate in the California Supreme Court, again invoking the appropriate extraordinary remedies available and that denied the requested relief. (See, Appendix C).
